SELF-CARE DOMAINS

PURPOSE
It is important for everyone to understand the need to take care of one’s self in all five domains of living. This pie chart illustrates that each domain is of equal importance and needs attention.

ACTIVITY
Educate the teens about the importance of all five domains: physical (body), intellectual (mind), emotional (psychological), social (relationships) and spiritual (different for each person). Explain that most people tend to do a reasonable job of taking care of themselves in a few areas while neglecting others. Ask group members to share one or two self-care activities they currently engage in and discuss in which domain(s) they fall. Point out that the same activity could fall into different domains for different people. Distribute the handout as homework. Participants are asked to record what they do for themselves over the course of a week, noting the self-care activity in the appropriate piece of the pie. It is extremely important to help group members understand that many activities will fall into more than one domain. Encourage them to think about the benefit they derive from the activity and list it in every appropriate domain.

At the next session, ask people to report what they learned from this activity.

Some examples are:

Exercising
- Physical because it is good for my body and my health
- Social because I exercise with friends
- Emotional because I release some anger and/or frustration when I exercise

Walking/hiking
- Physical because of health benefits
- Spiritual because I walk in nature and find that to be my spiritual connection
- Emotional because walking is a stress-buster for me

Reading
- Intellectual because I’m stimulating my brain by thinking
- Emotional because I’m reading escape novels
- Spiritual because I’m reading uplifting books

ARE YOU TAKING CARE OF YOURSELF?

PURPOSE
This self-assessment tool can be used to help determine what the teens are doing to take care of themselves and what they are willing to try.

ACTIVITY
After a discussion regarding the need and benefits of self-care, distribute the handout and ask teens to look over the list, checking the appropriate columns. The group can then discuss why the various suggestions on the list are important and how they manage the things that they do. It is also worthwhile to discuss some of the items they judged negatively which might be reframed as self-care. (i.e. sleeping more than usual could be escapism or it could be restorative.)

Ask for a show-of-hands for who checked “No, not yet,” for a particular item. Ask when they think they will begin that activity or a comparable one. If participants have additional suggestions for self-care, encourage them to share.
